

Inflection Point Systems Named Sitecore Technology Partner

Columbia, Md., March 16, 2010 – Inflection Point Systems, providing enterprise class software product development to power innovation, today announced that it has signed a partnership agreement with Sitecore, the leading provider of .NET Web Content Management System (CMS) software. The partnership encompasses both the United States and Latin America.

“We are excited to be linked with one of the leading Content Management Platforms in the market and look forward to collaborating with Sitecore to build scalable, enterprise-class web platforms for our global clients,” said Carlos Montemayor, CEO of Inflection Point. “We are impressed with Sitecore’s platform and its capabilities which, coupled with our highly-skilled engineering team will greatly benefit customers in both regions.”

Inflection Point is a world-class software consulting and product development company that helps companies in all stages, from start-ups to mature businesses, turn their innovative ideas into superbly-executed software applications. Inflection Point runs on the nearshore outsourcing model, which allows domestic companies to overcome the barriers associated with traditional outsourcing models to offer uncompromised quality at an exceptional value. With headquarters in Columbia, Md., and a software engineering center in Monterrey, Mexico, Inflection Point offers the geographic proximity necessary to facilitate easy communication and collaboration.

“Inflection Point provides exceptional expertise in implementing our CMS technology,” said Paul Markun, VP Marketing, Sitecore. “The company’s focus on providing value added services and product development makes Inflection Point an ideal partner and we look forward to working with them.”
